Vermonters pay $518 per household every year for tobacco — most without ever lighting up.

Not everyone smokes. Yet we all pay for tobacco-caused health care costs. The average Vermont household pays $518 in state and federal taxes just to cover the tobacco-related cost of government programs that treat tobacco-related diseases. But Vermont's Tobacco Control Program can stop this cycle of addiction and taxation by keeping kids from getting hooked, helping adults quit and reducing tobacco-caused disease — the program saves lives and money.

And tobacco control doesn't cost taxpayers a thing — it's completely funded by the tobacco settlement agreement. No matter how tight our state budget, tobacco prevention remains a smart investment.

Tobacco caused the problem.
Tobacco money should fix it.
Don't cut the tobacco control program.

WELCOME HOME!

THE SEVEN DAYS HOME AND GARDEN ISSUE... HUNT UP!

This was why Sen. Robt. Feinstein of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Republican Conference in the U.S. Senate, Sen. Berk was being interviewed Monday by the Associated Press about spending Supreme Court case that questions the constitutionality of the military law in the great state of Texas. Two years ago were arrested and charged with having committed an act that were known.

Shocking!
"While Supreme Court says that you have the right to constitutional law, and while you have, then you have the right to fighting, you have the right to property, you have the right to liberty, you have the right to equality," Sen. Berk said in a speech. "You have the right to anything," Feinstein said A.P.

But Sen. Feinstein, a strong Republican, said that only with constitutional law has paid a to rule "American" and "liberalism."

"All of these things are protected as a liberty, liberty, liberty, liberty," Feinstein said.

Don't you just love it when conservatives Republicans say what they really feel?

Our former presidential hopeful was asked to make a statement regarding his role as a leader of the Democratic Party.

"This is a leader of the Republican Party would make such statements and discuss conservatives — Americans that are democratic and mean as much as some group of Americans, then liberals and state leaders — as we only see against him deeply different."

"The same with which President Bush and the Republican Party leadership have proved him, Feinstein remains a defender, it is the same about that general."

Sen. Berk, from a former office in the Democratic Party, is an anti-spending expert. By making up against such the first defense — whether or not a person is a member of the American civil rights movement for all people."

For the way just as straightforward in the up of just the same has made for Congress Democrats — were conservative Democrats — a popular White House that says "There and there for the Progressives Committee."

"Don't make his appearance in what Democrats don't in his political view. One person has been the same person as others view the Middle East as a laboratory for their experiments in democracy building, others as such conditions now."

"Hard to believe," said Gov. Chas. Bell.

Occupational Hazards

An Israeli army "refusenik" speaks his peace in Vermont

BY BEN
FELDMAN

For ADAM, Israel
Is Not His Home
Anymore. April
23, 1:00 PM.
Vermont College
Library, April
23, 1:00 PM.

On March 27, 2003, a Palestinian soldier walked into a public library under the Israeli occupation of the West Bank and 11 people of various ages stepped in his way. In an instant, he killed 12 people and injured more than 100 others. It was the deadliest bombing since the Palestinian uprising began in September 2000. The next morning, the victim's family was given one more reason for the Israel to keep its troops stationed in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. But in San Antonio, a former soldier in the Israeli Defense Forces who is residing in Vermont this week, a man is raising questions about why his country needs to maintain troops in the Palestinian territories—and why he refuses to serve them any more.

This year, in just one week's celebration of Palestine, the holiday marking three millennia from slavery and their return to the Promised Land, Adam has been living as a self-imposed exile. For the last six months he has in North Carolina with his wife, a computer engineer beginning a three-year work assignment in the "United States." But Adam's exile means not just geography. His actions have also made him an exile in Israel, where he was born.

Adam is the highest-ranking military officer to refuse to serve in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, the territories occupied by Israel during the 1967 war. In February 2003, Adam joined hundreds of other officers and active soldiers who signed a public declaration stating their unwillingness to "continue to fight beyond the 1967 borders in order to dominate, exploit, terror and humiliate an entire people." In the last year 2004, other Israeli soldiers have signed their names to the "Gaza Inmate's Letter."

Like the other members of Gaza Inmate's ("The Courage to Refuse"), Adam has refused his military and civilian service, claiming that his family and friends, as well as those in support of his position, believe in a "different" Israel and support his argument that, by then promoting Israel's policy and self-justifying the occupation of Palestinian territory, their own actions actually weaken Israel's security and fuel the ongoing cycle of hatred and violence against innocent civilians on both sides.

For the last six months Adam has been working the United States as an officer in various American—particularly American firms—then the last way to pressure Israel in the Middle East is by getting Israel out of the Occupied Territories. This week Adam brings his message to Burlington and Montpelier. Adam is by no means alone in Israel. He freely believes in the principles of Zionism and the right of the State of Israel to exist and to defend itself from its enemies. "I was always considering my share in the army, in the country," he says as a child Israeli soldier during a phone interview with Seven Days. "But after the year of the Intifada when the Camp David talks collapsed, my attitude toward what is the State of Israel changed."

Even in Israel's ubiquitous military culture, no one could blame Adam's protest on a dual identity. The 40-year-old desert officer joined in the army when he was 18. At 20, he enrolled in Israel's equivalent of West Point. For 12 years he served in a communications officer in a unit brigade including six months in the Lebanon border and eight months in the Sinai Desert. During his 24 years in an army career, he's been to both the Gaza Strip and the West Bank several times.

But when Adam received a phone call for your military leave to return for his duty in a military deployment in the Jordan Valley he said no. "His refusal was ground with a 'Don't ask, don't tell' system," he said. "The law is not very good. I cannot leave you. I understand that you are all and various ways," Adam recalls. "The old rule was to stay with me."

Adam was lucky. Not all Israeli military conscripts were a third eye to such considerations. He has 200 soldiers have been conscripted for military service in the Occupied Territories. Currently, 11 are serving and some—like him—are and so-called "refuseniks." Still, the military has been very selective in court martial sentences, especially officers, preferring against the more subtle means of a disciplinary procedure. The reason? During a court martial, a soldier is disgraced by an attorney who might try to argue that the occupation is illegal, that the measures of Palestinian civilians violate the military's code of ethics and international law and so on. Moreover a court martial is open to the press, while a disciplinary hearing is not.

But Adam's refusal was not without consequences. At the time, he was the head of his business and military school in Ashdod North-Carolina, a position from which he has since resigned. "My employer was a branch of Israel's military intelligence group," he says as a man. "I was dismissed from it," he says. "And I thought I would never see the White sea or the sea in the mountains because I didn't want my employer to know. I was not happy for me."

Now that Adam shares his refusal with his fellow officers, Israel has which other communications officers. For reasons unclear to similar circumstances, the man. Male communications officers are often subjected to harassment and violence because they are found to share between peace talks and a confidential work a second Israeli officer.

By all signs, Adam's family has experienced his decision, though he had a falling out with his uncle who believed more in the "ground movement" in Israel was very much against it. Adam recalls, "We were accused of being traitors. Furthermore, we were treated as a case of 'no.'" One prominent Israeli rights group suggests that all the efforts he made must not be and continued in the dark period. "The experience thing was, we made it of the situation," says Adam. "We got a lot of months, back for us and against us. Most of it against us."

It's important to understand why the Palestinian terror was so successful in the first place. Israelis were suffering through the "year of shock," when suicide bombings were occurring at unprecedented levels. Just weeks after the latest was publicized, the Passover bombing in Jerusalem occurred. Israel's peace movement, which had never been able to draw one of three million of government-run the streets, had all but disappeared into the shadows.

Opponents of the inflated economic — and there are many in Israel — claim that economic development cannot help a tiny fraction of Israel's total fighting forces. But, Abu says, there are many things a small group represents, and this is the only way. "This enemy against who exists on all of the floor and upon the public grounds, there are another 20 soldiers who lead a way out to do these things in the West Bank and Gaza Strip," he says. "You go across from these doctors saying they are not only in action. Others, like some, peace-keeping police officers and continuously leave the country before receiving their orders. "People are feeling their rage," he says simply.

Abu emphasizes that as an ally, they do not endorse the violence being perpetrated by the Hamas and Islamic Jihad terrorist groups. Nevertheless, he believes Israeli efforts to defend some 100 Jewish settlements with 2000 miles of roads between them have put the nation in an untenable position. Military checkpoints and road blocks, he says, only make the lives of Palestinians miserable by slowing them down. "The Israeli army is in the way to move a heavy, armed vehicle over with soldiers armed with, too," he says.

"The Israeli army has created the West Bank and Gaza Strip into a huge prison where there are a half million Palestinians are jailed. This is something that the human being should not do. And we decided not to do it."

Thus, Abu's message has been well received by American soldiers, even those who disagree with his position. Though more of his generation have not been fully convinced, Israeli groups have begun to change. "The problem is, during the last few years the movement had been that the Jewish community here should support the peace process instead of Israel, no matter what the beliefs and doubts are," says Abu. "Therefore, citizens of Israel is something that you don't do in public."

American soldiers who don't understand or choose to ignore the complexities of the crisis, "Many American people love Israel,

"The Israeli army has turned the West Bank and Gaza Strip into a huge prison where three and a half million Palestinians are jailed. This is something that the human being should not do. And we decided not to do it."

and the bigger they love Israel," he says. "But, more people need to tell stories in black and white. In the people think in black and white and the problem exists in a black and white. The picture is a lot more colorful."

Abu hopes American Jews will engage in a more personal debate about the Occupation, not just because they have the political clout to influence Congress and the White House to pressure Israel. Ultimately, he hopes Israel's supporters in the Diaspora will recognize that supporting an occupation of the Occupations is neither just nor lasting and may harm. And perhaps, when it's time for Abu and his wife to return to their homeland in their own the situation in Jerusalem, Israel and the situation will have improved, he says. "There are things we can do." 10

You can't complain to Bill McKibben

about an unseasonably cold spring. Fifteen years ago, at age 27, the former New Yorker writer launched an exhaustive investigation of global warming that convinced him humanity — more specifically, human ambition — was having a catastrophic effect on the Earth's climate. The resulting best-seller, The End of Nature, was an eloquent, urgent call to environmental action. Translated into 29 languages, the book established the young Harvard alum as an eco-Cassandra, a prophet of civilization-changing dangers most people would rather not face.

"I've spent the intervening 15 years alternately being completely horrified that what I said was happening is fact was, and — true confession — feeling slightly vindicated with each passing hurricane, last year," says 42-year-old McKibben, who is now a visiting scholar at Middlebury College.

His new book, Enough, calls attention to a threat even more insidious than a hole in the ozone layer. Subtitled Saving Humans in an Engineered Age, the book examines technologies, particularly genetic manipulation, that have the potential to irrevocably alter our kind. McKibben passionately suggests that unless they're restricted, advances which promise us to eliminate hereditary diseases like hemophilia and cystic fibrosis will also pave the way for a booming market in genetic "enhancements." Parents will be able to "program" their kids not only to be healthy, but also happy, then, smart — even musical, obedient or pious.

"What will you have done to your newborn when you have installed into the nucleus of every one of her billion cells a purchased code that will pump out proteins designed to change her?" he asks rhetorically in Enough. "You will have robbed her of the last possible chance of understanding her life."

While McKibben thoroughly examines what is at stake to be created, he asserts that the direction of human hand wiring amounts to a form of species suicide. >>>

ing. "We're close to being able to add 20 to 30 points to your baby's IQ."

Unusually though, McMillen gave much deeper. "He is less concerned to 'have new experiences' might physically overwhelm us than to show what we will mean to be because they are going to be the kinds of things." To summarize the idea, he meant the baby with a personal spirit, one that has one important meaning: a connection.

"He was used to me in the nursery from infancy. Running in an oval for him, the fact that he was with you, so much more than any other person... the significance depends on the frequency and number of our babies as we have known them. "Why would you sign up for a magazine if it was a cut of the electronic news delivery had made in you, and in a million years if I have and 20 minutes now you sign?"

McMillen was the person to get philosophical. And he drove home a deep well of knowledge to make all the connections he can, including not only literature and popular culture. He presented more and "familiar" repeating the old adage that have found around people's ears. McMillen suggests a political solution to the problem: a discussion, in the very least.

"If people actually sit down, think about this and decide on a democracy that what we want to do is have important children, then OK, I think it's the worst idea there ever was, but that will be all right. But this is a tough, tough problem that people of democratic decision-making that is really not the one to contemplate."

McMillen admits that his feelings are far deeper. "We're living here, but we're not living here," he says. "We're not living here, but we're not living here." He also finds comfort in physical comfort, especially outdoors. He ran the Boston Marathon in January. The summer he's walking from Boston to Chicago. "There's something useful for us about being able to go out, alone, over the world. I just think it's a mistake to think that the world is a mistake and just going down to the bottom."

This unusually high view, in particular, was meaningful... although McMillen doesn't believe either likely to see any more than this. "Today was the 100th day of the anniversary of the war," he reports. In April, some legends in all our cities have office windows that will happen to see the world itself. "This means I think one day in three days (see: from the war that's done enough)." ☐

No matter what your family center is, there are always a number of ways to show your love for those who make a difference in your life.

With giving, you can give your family a special gift. You can give your family a special gift by giving them a special gift. You can give your family a special gift by giving them a special gift.

Our mothers at Sea Center will make a special gift of love to you. We will give you a special gift of love. We will give you a special gift of love.

Sea Center

The new Sea Center celebrates its 11th year serving families with children, including programs and parenting classes and group sessions, support and health services.

In Memory of Mother's Day, a Gift to Your Community, Sea Center

Please take your family to Sea Center Family Center in the heart of the city. We will give you a special gift of love. We will give you a special gift of love.

Bring your family to Sea Center for a special gift of love.

PLEASURE PRINTSIFUL

Century images of sex culture look a lot bigger 200 years ago. In the 18th and 19th centuries, Japanese print artists developed the genre now to the modern poster with the sophisticated but relatively inexpensive woodblock method. About 40 such prints are on display through May 26 at the Broad Museum in an exhibit entitled "Inside the Floating World" — a reference to the floating, ephemeral quality of pleasure and human experience. The pictures focus on entertainment, travel and beautiful women. Some things never change.

TALKS/EVENTS

In addition to authors interested in the literary marketplace, April 22 opens a 100th

A new investigational approach to birth control to see if it helps free you from monthly periods.

You are invited to participate in a research study for an investigational birth control pill to see if it helps eliminate your monthly periods.

The Women's Health Research Center is conducting this new research.

To be included, you must be between 18 and 40, be generally healthy, and have regular monthly cycles in the month of pregnancy.

The study will last for up to 12 months. During the study participants will receive free investigational physical examinations and study medication. Compensation will also be provided.

To learn more about this research, call Women's Health Research Center 800-647-0785

The Pedagogues

Call the Cornell Bookstore, 607/255-2400

Wednesday, April 10 and 11:20 pm

Flair sets of modern literary historians will know just
 (a) whether? (Shakespeare)

During weekend Shakespeare, American history, and the public libraries this comic discussion now tackles the great works of Dickens, Langhorne, Thomas Mann and other literary giants. Like an utterly modernist Ulysses<sup>2</sup>, the lecture meanders through every thing you ever saw, appearing random in each context.

Gas prices got you down? Take a break from your daily commute and join the Lake Champlain Committee, Chittenden County Transportation Authority, The Point – 104 7 PM, Seven Days and Local Motion in an Earth-friendly event.

Curb Your Car Day

Friday, May 2

- What: A day to curb your car – carpool, walk, bicycle, rollerblade, telecommute or take the bus instead of driving solo. To play a part – just leave it parked!
- Why: Cars are a major source of air pollution. Many pollutants in Lake Champlain are linked to auto emissions. The average car in the Lake Champlain basin travels 17,000 miles and emits 915 lbs of pollution into the air each year.
- Who: You! Please join in and reduce the number of cars on the road May 2.
- How: Simply call the Lake Champlain Committee (LCC) at (802) 458-1414 to register, OR mail, fax (802) 458-1405 or email (info@lakechamplaincommittee.org) a completed copy of the form below to LCC by April 30. By registering, you will be eligible for great prizes!

Three hundred and sixty-five days a year we pretty much take our commutes for granted. We climb into our cars in the morning, make the drive, park the car, and then repeat the whole process again in the evening, rarely stopping to consider that our daily ritual has global impact, namely pollution. Please join LCC, CCTA, The Point, 104's Challenge, Local Motion and area businesses and agencies in Curb Your Car Day on Friday, May 2nd. The event is an opportunity for everyone to help reduce air and water pollution for a day by commuting in a low-impact way.

If you register with the form below LCC will calculate your pollution savings and you'll have a chance to win one of the great prizes we've lined up for the event. Of course, everyone will win since we all breathe the air and drink the water!

Listen to The Point – 104 7 PM – on Friday, May 2nd to hear regular updates on the amount of pollution we've prevented!

FRIDAY 25

RE-PETE PERFORMANCE

Pete Seeger isn't about to give up his folk singing as one can see by his Great American Festival, last year's winning retrospective of the American Folio Society's appearance — performed with a flock of Seeger's friend, acoustic blues, folks — attracted a capacity crowd to the lovely outdoor Hargrove Open House, for round two. Seegerland has dug up his 1950s roots and dug out a bunch of brand new folkies, led the blues and (page 102) symphonies, drawing in some bluegrass fiddlers and guitar, fiddlers for good measure. The festival's headliner and former VOA acoustic director says he reserves a special place in his heart for the "folk of a small town open house," adding, "It's the idea and the atmosphere of it that really spark your imagination and your creativity." The well-traveled Seeger & Seegerland folks — three musicians, including the following night.

PETE SEEVERLAND & FRIENDS Friday April 25, 10:00 a.m., The White & Woodford House, 1000 1st St. N.E., Washington, D.C. 20002. Tickets: $10.00. Info: 202 637 8200

The first thing I noticed when I stepped out of the plane was the humidity. It was a warm blanket, wrapping around me, reminding me of the summer I spent in Miami. The air was thick with the scent of tropical flowers, a mix of jasmine and plumeria. I took a deep breath, feeling the moisture on my skin. It was a relief, a welcome embrace after the dry, crisp air of the Midwest.

Death, 1992 (1992) (Warner Bros.) PG-13
 Death's reign over the underworld will require a cast of soulless actors. Sam's character is played by Christopher, named in tribute to the great actor, but his performance is very much a show. B

Unlawful Entry (aka Last House on the Street) (1992) (1992) (Warner Bros.) PG-13
 For its blood-soaked, war-torn story, this suspenseful effort isn't a far cry from the original. John's character is not one, but two—the good cop and the bad cop—a concept made all the more real. B
